(Even Aquinas admits such an intuition, or, as a French writer terms it, la saisie immédiate de dieu. ) In process philosophy we, or the created minds, influence God for the same reason, that is, God intuitively, or, in Whitehead's phrase, prehends them. The single principle of prehending, which is but an aspect of creativity or experience as, in principle and always, partly active or self-creative, utilizing previous events as materials for new syntheses, the syntheses themselves furnishing new ...
