Rocha then proposes with fighting words a cinema that embraces rather than refutes or shrinks from hunger: "The Brazilian doesn't eat, but he's ashamed to say so. More importantly, he doesn't know where his hunger comes from. We know — we who made these ugly, sad films, these screaming, desperate films, in which reason hasn't always taken center stage — we know that hunger will not be cured by government plans and that the cloak of Technicolor will aggravate rather than hide ...
