Nurturing Children is not a history of pediatrics so much as an annotated bibliography of pediatric texts. The Colons exhaustively catalog every text pertaining to the care and feeding of children, dating back almost to the origin of the printed word, and they merit praise for the effort. The chapters are divided into epochs or centuries, and each is prefaced by a short list of historical events occurring in each interval. The lists, however, are a poor substitute for historical ...

This history of the evolution of pediatrics from the beginning of recorded civilization examines chronologically the medical and societal antecedents of current child care. Although the term pediatrics is modern, the book explores the antecedents that facilitated the evolution of pediatric care as a separate discipline and a unique science. These antecedents include ancient manuscripts and the writings of acknowledged medical classicists, and the works of physicians in the East who recorded the ...

Nurture groups were the brainchild of educational psychologist Marjorie Boxall in 1969. Large numbers of young children were entering primary school in Inner London with severe emotional, behavioural and social difficulties, which led to unmanageable rates of referral for placement in special schools or for child guidance treatment.
