The City Without Jews (Stadt Ohne Juden) was a piece of social science fiction written in the 1920's. Its premise is that a future Austrian government might decide to exile all its Jews in order to reduce the competition for Christian Austrians. After the completion of the forced emigration, any Jew found in the city would be put to death. In the story, a well-disguised Jew re-infiltrates ...

Recently restored and featuring a new soundtrack, The City Without Jews is one of few surviving Austrian Expressionist films, and the magnum opus of the great director H.K. Breslauer. Filmed in 1924, it can be seen as a chilling premonition of the Holocaust—the premise is the political rise of the Christian Social Party, which orders all Jews to evacuate Austria. In the ensuing months, the sober reality of a society without Jews sets in, as cultural institutions close and cafes are ...

The CITY WITHOUT JEWS is a film adaptation of a novel, which must be described as visionary in the most terribly imaginable way. Vienna embodies as location the fictitious place Utopia, in which the story is settled. It hurts the soul and one starts to cry when one imagines what only a decade later took place in the Austrian capital Vienna, everywhere else in Austria and in Germany. Hugo Bettauer, the author of the book, was shot a few months after the premiere of the film by a National ...

The City Without Jews. His best-known novel was Die Stadt ohne Juden ("The City Without Jews") from 1922, a satire on the acutely topical subject of antisemitism. In the book, a fictional politician orders the expulsion of all Jews from Vienna. One writer noted that "in scenes that are frighteningly prophetic, Austria borrows thirty stock car trains from neighboring countries to help in the expulsion (to the east) of the Jews and their belongings."
