Ashlesha nakshatra, star ruled by Nagas, Divine serpents, is one of the most challenging and most misunderstood lunar mansions. It is also the most vulnerable and the most sensitive of all the stars, which can often make its energy overly introverted and overly protective. Before we experience final freedom, release and detachment of Magha nakshatra, it is here, in Ashlesha, that all our inner attachments, poisons and layers of our ego, are getting intensely purified and finally need to be ...

Journey with the Nakshatras - Learn Vedic Astrology

The 27 signs comprising this zodiac are called Nakshatras in Hindi and in the west are usually known as the Lunar Mansions. These Lunar Mansions represent the greatest difference between western and vedic astrology, as they form the basis for most of the unique calculations and interpretations in its charts. A 13deg 20sec division of the zodiac is called a Lunar Mansion or a Nakshatra. As per the stories, Daksha Prajapati had 27 daughters/Nakshatra whom he married off to Chandra/Moon. The Moon takes about 1 day to cross one Nakshatra. The Nakshatras are extremely important markers in astrology and some of the ways they are used are as follows.

The 27 Lunar Mansions, Nakshatra - psychologically astrology

So, each of these lunar days translates into the sky being divided into 27 constellations, called the Nakshatras. The Zodiac, with its twelve signs, is superimposed over the 27 Nakshatras. Each Nakshatra equates to 13 degrees and 20 minutes of the sky. Each Zodiac sign equals 30 degrees of a particular sign, covering about two Nakshatras and a small portion of the next one. Thus, stars are akin to time segments on a clock of 27 units through which hands of time pass (the moon or other planets).
